

"Dustbowl formed in May of 2006 after a few friendly drinks led to some serious plans of creating a unique soundin' band. Somekinda American Underground Rock music, Americana / Alt. Country, old Country stuff, traditional Folk, Blues,Punk-Rock of coss'.

Dustbowl is not a revival band but wanted to introduce contemporary themes that people nowadays can relate to and this is how Dustbowl's "Freight Train Ramblin' Sound" came to be, their unique desert "Dusty Rock" music!

"Dusty" songs can be likened to the train's lonesome whistle, the wailing of the rails as the long black iron horse glides over'em. Dustbowl is all about love lost and found, about being sorrow-bound and lonely, about livin' like a "hobo" being a-driftin' and a-ramblin', about pickin' a tune with some friends...

Dustbowl released "Ramblin' Blues EP" in 2006 through their own Dusty Records label. That was the start of their Train-Country rhythm. The following year, the band recorded - in just four days - their debut album "Troublebound & Lonesome" which was released on On Stage Records. "Troublebound & Lonesome" reviews combined with the band's energetic live shows has gained them a cult status and a strong following in the local underground scene.

Throughout 2008, the band continued to play gigs constantly and worked on new material with the addition of John Hardy on pedal steel guitar. Their sound changed into a "Desert Rock" and Alt. Country style. After Big George's departure, Dustbowl went into the studio in May 2009.

The band recorded 14 new songs for their latest album entitled "Goin' Down" which features notable special guests such as Phil Shoenfelt (Fatal Shore, Southern Cross), Jeremy Gluck (The Barracudas) and Alex K. (The Last Drive, The Earthbound).

"Goin' Down" got raving reviews in the local and international press and became their personal anthem...their "earth" music elegy."
